June 2005

Located in southern Montana, Gallatin County is Montana's fifth most populous with 75,637 residents, according to the U.S. Census Bureau's 2004 estimates. Bozeman, the county seat, is the state's fifth largest city with a population of 30,753, according to the 2003 estimates.

Bozeman is home to Montana State University and the Museum of the Rockies. Montana State University has a strong influence on the Gallatin County economy, accounting for 3,300 of the 3,658 state government jobs listed on the 2003 Employment by Industry table (see inside). The fall 2004 student enrollment was 12,003. Government employment overall accounts for about 18 percent of the total Gallatin County workforce and generates nearly 23 percent of the total annual wages paid.

Construction activity has been strong in Gallatin County in 2003, especially in the home building market. Construction employment is about 12 percent of the total private employment, compared to seven percent statewide. The college campus and proximity to Yellowstone National Park help create the large accommodation and food services employment of 18 percent of the total private employment. This compares to the statewide sector employment of about 14 percent. Healthcare is one area of Gallatin County that's not as significant as it is statewide, or in the other more populated counties. It's about nine percent of the total private employment compared to 16 percent for statewide.

Agriculture is important to the area's economy. Gallatin County is fifth in Montana for the largest number of farms and ranches: 1,074 (see inside table). According to the 2002 Census of Agriculture, Gallatin County is number two in Montana for total value of agricultural products sold, and number two for value of crops, including nursery and greenhouse products sold.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, median income for Gallatin County households in 2002 was $39,802, compared to Montana's median income of $34,105 for the same year. Median income is the average per household income in the county (no matter how many people live in the home); per capita income (inside table) is all income in the county divided by the number of people in the county.
